Worldwide Libyan Activities of Concern to the U.S. Government

The Qadhafi government in Libya is continuing a wide range of activities which are opposed to, and in many cases are a direct threat to, U.S. interests in the Middle East and other areas of the world. Among the primary activities of current concern are:

- Continued support for international terrorist groups and national liberation movements in Africa, the Middle East, and other areas.

- The new trilateral treaty among Libya, Ethiopia, and PDRY, which poses a threat to Egypt, Sudan, Somalia, North Yemen, Saudi Arabia, and Oman.

- Qadhafi's support to radicals in Central America. []

25X1

[] Central American and the Caribbean is "the most important area of the world" for Libyan foreign policy, with Panama, Nicaragua, and Grenada as three countries of particular interest to Qadhafi.

- Libyan hawkish positions on oil pricing and production. []

25X1

[] Qadhafi plans to use the radical Palestinians to sabotage Saudi oil facilities, if the Saudis do not agree to Libyan demands for increased prices and reduced production.

- Continued Libyan military occupation of Chad.

- Continued influx into Libya of sophisticated Soviet weapons in quantities far in excess of any legitimate need.

- Continued Libyan opposition to, and attempted sabotage of, the Middle East peace process.

- Libyan involvement in Lebanon which continues to exacerbate that already difficult situation.

- Qadhafi's assumption, in the coming year, of the Chairmanship of the Organization of African Unity, a position which will increase his prestige and capacity for increased meddling in Africa.
